...The truth behind their journey

My parents devastated their savings on failed procedures, remortgaged their house, and still had no money to proceed.

My mom lost her leg serving her country and to add insult to injury, was denied fertility coverage.

Cancer robbed my beautiful 28-year-old mom-to-be of her future fertility, creating a need for donor eggs and gestational surrogacy.

My two moms faced criticism and discrimination being told they could never create a “family.”

Military veterans... cancer survivors... same sex couples...those who’ve invested thousands on failed procedures... all are grant recipients of Baby Quest with impactful stories to share.

Our Mission at Baby Quest

About Baby Quest Foundation

At Baby Quest Foundation, our mission is to make the dream of parenthood come true by providing financial assistance to those who cannot afford the high costs of procedures such as IVF (in vitro fertilization), gestational surrogacy, egg and sperm donation, egg freezing, and embryo donation.

Baby Quest was founded by Pamela Hirsch who witnessed her daughter Nicole's lengthy battle with infertility. Because of the family's ability to help financially, Nicole and her husband's journey ended successfully.

"Baby Quest is my payback for being fortunate to be able to help our daughter and son-in-law build a family through surrogacy. I simply cannot imagine the pain and frustration a couple experiences - knowing there is a medical solution for infertility and yet not being able to afford it." — Pamela Hirsch

Together, let's give hope.

Here's the nitty gritty

- Grants are awarded twice yearly.
- Unlike loans, grants do not require payback.
- Recipients include heterosexual, same-sex couples, and singles.
- Applicants can reside throughout the U.S.
- Baby Quest respects diversity in its recipients.

Simone & Antonio

Infertility was never something that had crossed our minds, both coming from big families. We assumed starting a family would be easy.

After no results, I began working with a fertility specialist. After months normalizing my body's reproductive cycles, we discovered Antonio had a low sperm count, another factor contributing to our lack of success.

We were soon told that our best chances were for Antonio to do a sperm extraction surgery paired with IVF. With no insurance coverage for the newly suggested treatments, we were devastated. Our chance of conceiving a child would be delayed for several years.

In addition to the financial strain...infertility felt extremely isolating.

We not only hid this part of our lives from those closest to us but also struggled to communicate our fears and concerns with one another.

Through research, we came across Baby Quest. Receiving the news that we were selected as December 2017 recipients gave us a sense of hope.

In February 2019, we welcomed not one, but two amazing girls into our lives. Going through infertility involves compromise and patience. Life often does not happen as planned.

Thank you Baby Quest. You not only gave us hope, you made it possible for us to create life.

Tina & Ashley

From the moment we began dating, we knew that having a family of our own was one of the most important dreams we shared. We just never imagined it would be this hard to make that dream come true. In the darkest moments of our fertility journey, we have even considered the idea that our failed attempts at conception may have been a punishment from God. However, we are reminded that our God is both loving and kind, full of grace and truth. I believe that motherhood is definitely part of our greater purpose – to show the world that love makes a family.

While my heart was certainly made to be a teacher, our fertility journey has been made all the more challenging because of my career. To pour your life into helping raise other people's children, knowing that you may never be able to afford the opportunity to have your own has become a heart-wrenching reality for me. Additionally, it breaks my heart to see the only same sex parents we know are those who have gotten pregnant through a previous relationship or have the financial wealth necessary to create a family through IVF. We do not fit into either of these categories.

We are merely two loving, committed, hardworking women who live a very modest life.

It's the simple things that bring us joy. We do not dream of a fancy home, luxury cars or extravagant vacations. There is only one thing missing from our life – a child to love. On August 14, 2020, we welcomed Emilia Grace to the world

Baby Quest baby #100!
